To use the Layers panel, select View → Layers or press Alt+Ctrl+L (Windows) or Option+Command+L (Mac). To see the Properties palette, select Window → Properties or press Option+Shift+P (Mac) or Command+Shift+P (Windows). For more on using the Layers panel, see the sidebar "Using the Layers panel," later in this chapter. Getting familiar with the workspace The workspace, or window, is the main display in Photoshop. It contains any open layers, placed on the document canvas, and also contains palettes, toolbars, status bars, and tool options. When you finish editing a specific layer, the workspace automatically releases it from the layer and shows you a preview of the edited image. When a layer is visible in the workspace, you see the name of the layer (the number in the layer's thumbnail in the Layers panel) and its color (the color-coded thumbnail in the Layers panel). For example, if you have a button that you want to add to a layer, you can click the button to make it selectable in the Layers panel. You can delete a visible layer in the Layers panel, or you can select a visible layer and choose Edit ⇒ Delete Layer. Figure 7-1 shows a typical workspace in Photoshop. Figure 7-1: The standard Photoshop workspace. You can always close the windows in the workspace by clicking the X on the window's title bar. The Layers panel The Layers panel lists the currently open layers in the same order as in the image. The icon for the layer is displayed next to its name in the Layers panel. If you create a new layer, the layer is listed as thumbnail in the Layers panel (refer to Figure 7-1). But don't panic if you don't see a layer that you just created in the Layers panel. The Layers panel shows only the current layers, not all of them. To see the names of the layers that aren't visible in the Layers panel, click the Eye icon in the Layers panel to display the display (shown in the margin). You can use this window to add new layers by double-clicking layers in the display and adding a new layer. The Properties palette The Properties palette contains the following tools: Opacity: Opacity controls the visibility of layers

Adobe Photoshop CS3 (Updated 2022)

About Me Saturday, June 28, 2015 I adore a son as much as I do my husband and my cats. Sometimes though, there is a clash of the wants, much like an internal conflict of two equal mongrels in the household (note: no offense to my loyal and loving dogs, who are nothing but great-aunts and great-grand-dogs). The very first time I saw The Departed, I couldn't help but adore Art Linson, who played Lenny, and on the movie poster, and even more so, on the movie-collectors LP soundtrack, I saw Lenny. I adore Lenny the kid in the movie, but I also adore Art the actor. I adore Arthur Kennedy the legend, who is unfortunate to be dead, and I adore the slightly less-legendary Al Pacino. Both of my kids have seen the movie and they both think Pacino is better-looking. I don't. I adore Kurt Russell in the movie. He is my hero. He is Batman. He is Clint Eastwood. He is as cool as I hope to be, and I am but a humble dork. I adore both of the DiMuccio brothers (who come up with the names for the story beats in our fave feline flick), a.k.a. Eugene and Francis, who are the actors who play the two raccoons. Saturday, June 21, 2015 Before I begin a posting about my family reunion that I attended yesterday (pictures of which you can view here), I would like to let you know that I love my family reunion stories, and I plan to share more of them in the future, as I continue to cull my family albums. So, without further ado, my family reunion. My husband. My son. And his friends. Again, here they are, all smiling and joking and enjoying themselves: I love this picture. (This is one of my favorite family pics.) (This is Art with his friends.) (These two picture are from 2001, because the only pic I took was of Art with his friends, and there is a wide disparity between the two. My boys always looked quite a bit like their dad, and this is the only pic I have of them.) (I am getting a look of "that's a pretty good-looking

Last updated on.From the section Horse Racing The major winner returned after a spell of illness in September 2017 Seven horses fell at the Ebor Course in York over the Christmas weekend as wet conditions slowed the "consistent" autumn programme of runners at the six-furlong festival. Conditions "were difficult and unsuitable for the runners", according to Richard Hannon, the course's chief steward, and several potential winners were held up in the early stages. Mr Hannon said three of the runners fell on the closing circuit while others "unlucked on the same section". All seven were put down as their owners decided not to travel out. Seven runners fall at Ebor weekend Four horses were collected by the course medics on Sunday, two on Saturday and three on Friday These included the six-year-old gelding Gee Brummel, who returned from a spell of illness in September to claim the 2014 Great Yorkshire Handicap Chase at Newcastle and for whom it was a sixth win from nine starts. Gee Brummel was leading the first part of the race, but was fourth when caught by All The King's Horses on the turn. Mr Hannon said the horse "might have got away", adding: "He was extremely unlucky. It was just a shame he couldn't finish on his first start back." The Ebor added: "We will have to wait and see whether the trainer or owner will come back out on another day." In the Eclipse Stakes at Sandown on Saturday, three-year-old High Bluff finished on the line in a 30-1 third behind the same Good Pioneer colt, with Korma Hanover fifth. Mr Hannon said: "Unfortunately it was the runner who was most unlucky, as he just got his head out of the race and it was high up on the neck. "We feel very sorry for the owner. It was the first time he had ridden the horse. "He got away at the same time as the horse, and it was a very unfortunate accident." The fall of the other runners was less dramatic and that of the leading runner, the three-year-old/five-year-old Beeshire Bear, was worse than that of High Bluff. Mr Hannon said: "He just fell over before the line and was dragged off the track
